van (Tom Moore) came to New York and followed the calling of street clean-ing. Ond day while on duty he was run down by a carriage occupied by Beatrice Newness, (Naomi Childers) a wealthy society girl, and Rodman Cadbury her swell suitor, so what berre Camayan did have was lost and he took a 3cb with a blasting gang. A red fine was thrust in Canavan's hand and he was told to keep the traffic back—his first taste of authority and he "grew drunk" on it. He even went home and gave his quarrelsome wife a dose of her own fistic medicine.

His growing aggressiveness atrans-ed the attention of Jim James, political boss, and as a pupil, Canavan rose rapidly. It was in his new authority of political boss that he next mee the beau-tiful girl who had run over him. The subsequent happenings have been woven into one of the most delightfully stirring stories ever screened.

Her mother's urgings rather than her own heart caused Amy to accept Heath Desmond as her flance. She regrets the action when she finds the young artist painting on Sunday and talking rather flippantly of his sin.

Encouraged by the advice of the young curate, who really wants the girl for himself. Amy sends Heath away. This is the beginning of a dramatic situation in "Cousin Kate," a Charles Frohman play by Hubert Henry Davice, which has been visualized by Vitagraph as an Alice Joyce production, directed by Mrs. Sidney Drew. It will be shown at the Strand theatre on Monday.
